Describe the present and original (if known) physical appearance

Dr. John Grove's residence and office stand on the East side of the courthouse square in Liberty. The building consists of a two-story rectangular store front five bays deep and two bays wide directly adjacent to the mid-block alley (Figure 1) and an attached two-story residence five bays long and three bays deep which extends to the South of the storefront (Figure 2). The first floor elevation of the structures is above that of the street; a concrete stoop provides access to the store, and a retaining wall of rock-faced ashlar limestone crowned by iron cresting defines the shallow front yard of the house. A one story shedroofed wing extends across the rear of both parts of the building (Figure The storefront has a shed roof sloped toward the North; the truncated hipped roof of the residence is covered with asbestos shingles and topped by a flat metal deck which is encircled by decorative cast iron cresting (Figure 4). Two chimneys stand on the roof of the house, and one on the storefront roof; all have smoke bells at their caps and are completely covered with mortar pargeting. The simple projecting eaves of the house are supported by scroll-cut exposed rafters and finished with a plain fascia; a plain boxed cornice is used on the eaves and front parapet of the storefront (Figure 5). The balloon frame walls of the entire structure are clad in wood clapboard siding, and the tops of the walls are finished with a band of vertical reeded boards cut in alternating lengths. The walls of the house are further ornamented by the use of a hexagonal cut on the four clapboards directly beneath the frieze band as well as another identical band of cut siding used just above the sills of the second story windows on the West and South elevations of the house. All window openings are made with a simple square casing which projects only slightly beyond the face of the siding; those of the residence have hinges for shutters, and one pair of louvered shutters survives on the South side of the storefront, facing the front porch of the house. Window sash are a mixture of the original two-over-two and later one-over-one double-hung sash; the

The facade of the storefront has a large show window balanced by two recessed entrances, one to the store and the other for a stairway to the second floor of the storefront. (Both doors are semi-glazed panelled leaves.) A single window is positioned in the center of the second story of the facade.

The principal feature of the facade of the residence is its one-story front porch, whose low hipped roof is supported by five square piers (Figure 6). Two-thirds of the way up each pier, a cyma reversa molding marks the top of the plain shafts; a similar molding is used at the tops of the piers, and extends along the soffit of the architrave. The band defined between these two moldings is filled by a screen of wooden tracery supported by fan-shaped brackets which are mounted on the sides of the piers. Larger brackets of similar design are mounted on the faces of the piers, and extend to the soffit of the porch. The fan surfaces of the brackets and the edges of the larger brackets are decorated with patterns of incised lines and dots. Smaller scroll-cut brackets are mounted on the architrave between the large brackets.

Statement of Significance (in one paragraph)

Dr. John Grove's Office and Residence is significant both historically and architecturally. Dr. John L. Grove was born in Fayette County, Pennsylvania, and came to Union County, Indiana, with his parents in 1846. Grove studied dentistry with Dr. John Doughty of Brownsville, Indiana, before opening a practice in Liberty. Dr. Grove served as a First Lieutenant in the Sixteenth Regiment of Indiana Volunteers in the Civil In 1880 he was elected Sheriff of Union County, and he was re-elected to that office in 1882. The combination of commercial and residential building types shown by Dr. Grove's building is an unusual one, as is its combination of Italianate massing with Victorian Gothic decorative details. Only one other local example, the 1879 John S. Nixon House located at One Fosdick Street, also in Liberty, illustrates this stylistic transition. The Nixon House is a Stick Style cottage complete with an Italianate campanile and a porch of square bracketed piers, and is illustrated in Wilbur Peat's Indiana Houses of the Nineteenth Century. Dr. Grove's storefront is a conventionalized Renaissance palazzo; the cubic massing, truncated hipped roof, and bell-topped chimneys of the residence are derived from Italian country villas. Such decorative devices as the shaped ends of the exposed rafters, the frieze of reeded boarding, and the belts of cut siding, however, follow the dictum of Pugin, Ruskin, and other Victorian Gothicists that decorative elements should either be integral to the materials and methods of construction, or obviously applied to plain surfaces, as in the case of the incised ornament of the front porch. This transition from the classical vocabulary represented by the Italianate style to the medieval fashions of the later Victorian Gothic and Queen Anne styles is thus visibly portrayed by Dr. Grove's building.
