Describe the present and original (if known) physical appearance

The two-story, three bay Amoss Building is of the Italianate style and is constructed of brick with a limestone foundation and quoins. The main (east) facade faces the busy downtown thoroughfare of Wabash Street. (Photo 1.) Located on an incline, the first story entry is approached by way of two limestone steps. The center entrance is flanked by display windows which stretch to the outside edges of the main facade. Each window is framed by limestone pilasters capped by simple stone Tuscan capitals. The original door, once replaced with a much smaller door, has recently been returned to its original proportions. The frame of the original transom is still in place, as are the two panels above the display windows.

The first and second stories are separated by a denticulated cornice of pressed metal which terminates with limestone scroll blocks. (Photo 2.) Attached to this cornice are four wrought iron brackets which originally held a balcony above the first floor entryway. A balcony has recently been reinstalled. Access to the balcony is from a second-story doorway centered in the main facade. This door, with a round arched glass in the upper half and a pair of recessed wooden panels below, is of identical width to the flanking second floor windows, with a panel above. All three second floor openings have stone sills and are surmounted by elaborate pressed metal window hoods supported by metal brackets. The corners of the second story masonry wall are accented by rusticated limestone quoins. The denticulated, pressed metal cornice is divided into three elongated oval panels, by four large and elaborate scroll brackets.

The west facade is two-story brick with a center, first-story entrance, and two-over-two windows on either side; second-story windows are directly above the first-story windows. The windows are all wood framed with limestone sills and brick relieving arches.

Inside the Jim Amoss Building, the brick party walls, as well as the ceilings, are plastered. Interior doors and trim are painted and grained to look like oak, and finished with a clear varnish.

Statement of Significance (in one paragraph)

The Amoss Building is an excellent example of a commercial Italianate structure. Never substantially altered, the building is key to the contiguous city block of 19th century buildings where it is located. Just south of the Wabash County Courthouse and on the town's main thoroughfare, the building was significant to the commercial development and stability of the flourishing town.

fine Italianate structure was built by James M. Amoss to serve as his law office. Impleted in 1880, the same year Wabash became the first city illuminated by electric lights, it was constructed during the period of greatest growth in Wabash. In this progressive community, the last quarter of the 19th century witnessed the construction of the greatest part of the town's existing commercial district. The Amoss Building is the only Italianate within that area to have escaped significant exterior alterations.

James Amoss, the original owner of the building, had arrived in Wabash as a young man of eighteen. Born at Point Pleasant, Virginia (now West Virginia) in 1838, he arrived in Wabash with his family in 1856. Choosing to follow a career in law, Amoss became equally active in the political arena, serving two terms as County Clerk. After he entered private practice with James Mackey in 1875, they moved their offices to the newly constructed Amoss Building early in 1881. After Mackey's death in 1887, Amoss entered the real estate business. His office remained on the building's first floor until 1897, when he moved his office to the Ray Block.

During the late 19th and early 20th century, the second floor of the building was the Knights of Pythias Lodge.
