

Old Librarians Never Die They Jump Out of Airplanes: Adventuring Through the Senior Years in Indiana

By Marie J. Albertson

Marie J. Albertson has lived in Carmel, Indiana for 16 years moving there from Plymouth. After earning an undergraduate degree from IU South bend, she continued her studies at IU and earned a Master of Library Science degree at age 60. Retiring from the Library Development Office at the Indiana State library in 2003, she then earned an Associate's Degree in counseling from Ivy Tech with the idea of encouraging women of older years to pursue their life's dreams. Marie is a popular motivational speaker. She has four grown children and seven grandchildren.

Marie

