Nutrition Fact Sheet

Calories
A calorie is a unit of energy, not a nutrient. The amount that is best for you depends on your height, weight, age, sex, and activity level.

Total Fat
Fats supply energy and perform several functions in the body. Too much fat in the diet is linked to many chronic health problems such as heart disease, some types of cancer, diabetes, and obesity.

Saturated Fat: Eat less than 10 percent of daily calories
Foods high in saturated fat are firm at room temperature. Examples include butter, stick margarine, shortening, and the fat in cheese and meat. Limit intake of fats and oils high in saturated fat.

Cholesterol: Eat no more than 300 mg per day
Cholesterol is a fatlike substance, but it is not a fat itself. Too much cholesterol in the bloodstream is linked to heart disease. Cholesterol is only found in foods from animals, including dairy products, butter, egg yolks, meat, fish, and poultry. Cholesterol is not found in vegetable oils, margarine, egg whites, or plant foods like grains, fruits, and vegetables.

Sodium: Eat no more than 2,400 mg per day
Diets high in sodium can promote high blood pressure for people who are sodium sensitive. Sodium is mostly found in processed foods. The rest comes from table salt and a small amount occurs naturally in foods.

Fiber: Eat 25-30 g each day
Fiber helps with digestion, promotes health, and protects the body against diseases. It is only found in plants. There are two types of fiber: soluble and insoluble. Soluble fiber helps lower cholesterol levels and insoluble fiber helps the colon function the way it should.

Protein: Eat 10-35 percent of daily calories
Protein builds, repairs, and maintains all body tissues. Protein is found in foods from animals and plants. Examples of food sources include meat, poultry, fish, eggs, milk, cheese, yogurt, soy, beans, peas, seeds, and nuts.

Carbohydrates: Eat 45-60 percent of daily calories
Carbohydrates are your body’s main source of energy and calories. They are classified in two groups: complex and simple. Examples of complex carbohydrates include cereals, beans, peas, rice, pasta, and vegetables. Simple carbohydrates include fruit, milk, cookies, cakes, candy, and soft drinks.

Potassium: Eat at least 2,000 mg per day
Potassium is found in a wide range of foods, especially fruits and vegetables. It is also found in meat, poultry, and fish. Good sources include potatoes, bananas, cantaloupe, and papaya.
