Join counselors, educators, social workers, social service and medical professionals, prosecutors, law enforcement, victim advocates, and parole/probation officers in this workshop for professionals focused on reaching and engaging diverse children, youth and families and growing healthier, safer communities. This training highlights: community organizing for sexual violence prevention, capacity building for cross cultural work with the underserved communities, community risk factors for sexual violence, and skill building for a culturally relevant approach to services and outreach. Topics will include:

- Developing language and skills for inclusive and culturally relevant work supporting healthy relationships and families
- Strengthening capacity for working with underserved communities, especially LGBTQ+, Latin@ Immigrant and Farm Worker Communities
- Gaining knowledge about emerging issues impacting prevention of sexual violence in our communities
- Identifying new tools and resources to build organizational and professional capacity for sexual violence prevention

No charge to attend training but you must register
To register, please contact Jayne Price at price80@purdue.edu
