

ISP Applicant Physical Training – WEEK 2

Below you will find both a Pre-Warm-up Warmup, Dynamic Movement Prep, Physical Training Prep, and Cool Down during your E-Learning. Some of these movements may be brand new so be sure to click the video links to see demos.

Each training session is meant to hit various planes of motion and movement patterns that will help unlock your athletic potential, and improve movement quality. Complete what you can as best you can.

The warm-ups and workouts have been designed to be done at home or on the road? No or little equipment is needed. The only requirements are proper workout attire, sometimes a jump rope and remember to always start with the warm-up. They can be done for time or for work (don't just go fast to sacrifice form and movement).

Pre-Warm-up Warm-up

Spend at least 5 minutes "Getting your Chili Hot" getting your heart rate up and getting sweaty. This can be a combination of jog, bike, jumping jacks, side shuffles, cariocas, etc. Just get your feet, knees, hips, and arms in motion to arouse the CNS, Increase blood flow to the muscles. Then perform the daily warm-up below. No more than 5 minutes is needed.

If you are rolling around or stretching too much in the initial warm-up you are not doing it right.

Dynamic Movement Preparation

The dynamic movement preparation prepares the body for the day by introducing proper positions and movements once the posture is established. The athlete is either challenged by combining Primals or executing them through different planes of motion. Any stimulus, momentary or not, affects the nervous system, and persists for some time after stimulation ceases. During warm ups, there is a grand opportunity to train the nervous system and ingrain new motor activities, creating kinesthetic awareness, or the sense of body position in space and time. This relies on proprioceptors in muscles, connective tissues, and joints to integrate information with balance and touch, breathing control mechanisms, lactic acid processing, elevated heart rate, and many more factors.

Physical Training Prep

The physical training preparation is designed to supplement what you are/may already be doing. This training will be designed to be done with or without load/weight/implements. This training will help you ramp you up and help you prepare for some of the training at the academy.

Cool Down

Failure to include a cool down following training will dramatically effect an athlete's recovery, daily performance, and long term development! A proper cool routine will empower your performance!

Physical Training Prep – Day 6

RUN – Set a timer for 14 Minutes and mark the distance you have completed. Bring a piece of chalk and circle where you stop. This can be done at a formal track or in your neighborhood. Solid goal is to get more than 2 miles in 14 minutes.

REST - 5 MINUTES

Stand tall and rest for a full 5 Minutes.

CONDITIONING - 15 MINUTES

RUN – Heading the opposite direction than you came, head back to your starting position. Push yourself because there is a time limit to cover the same distance. You have exactly 12:45 min to get back to the start or you will perform the extra credit work. Yes, this is less time than the 14 minutes it took you to get there so you better move!

EXTRA CREDIT

If you missed your second run, hit 3 rounds of descending reps. Round 1, Round 2, Round 3. If you hit your time, you only have to do Round 1 of each movement

30, 20, 10 – True Push-ups – Video Demo
